necessary information to Pasos' firm (the name of which was not given) in August, but had not received a reply. Aguilar warned that it was necessary to deal through the contacts already established and not to attempt to take independent action, as the established intermediaries have sufficient strength to cause any other action to fail.

2. Aguilar indicated that he had heard that an economic mission had arrived in Costa Rica which might cause their project to fail, but he saw no reason to discontinue their present project.
